Information on the artistic-scientific symposium *Possibilities for musical expression in the educational process of pupils and students (PMEEPPS)

Purpose of the Artistic-Scientific Symposium

The symposium is the continuation of the last year's topic (voice and vocal instrument in the process of education). This part of the symposium seeks to explore the role vocal instrument and voice play as basic means of musical communication between the teacher and the student, or the performer and the listener.

The symposium hopes to attract artists, scientists, professors, pre-degree, master and doctorate students, as well as other academic citizens. Performances and papers presented at the Symposium will be published in the Papers almanac.

The Current Situation Regarding Voice and Vocal instruments in the Education Process of Pupils and Students

Music education is integrated into many levels of the educational system: kindergartens, musical workshops, schools, faculties of teacher education, music schools, and academies. The possibilities of cooperation between those institutions are not entirely exploited. Pupils and students who approach music in a more serious manner lack performances, while listeners don't have many opportunities to listen to live music. In this age of the domination of synthetic sounds, natural tone is an important element in the development of musicality. Simplified and digitalised melodies, stripped inagogics, banalise the music. While singing and playing instruments within the family was once giving ground to the musicality, it is increasingly rare today. Pre-school and school children are deeply affected when they hear performances by young artists not much older than themselves. Naturally, good preparation and communication between teachers and music professors is essential.

The theme also fits in the general topic of the International conference on advanced and methodical research as it reaches into the problematic covered on other symposiums within the Conference.

The Symposium will be organised into two levels:

1. Musical performances

The first part of the Symposium will take place on November 12, 2009. The performance will take form of a "musical podium", allowing participation for: music school students, music students, young artists. The choice of compositions and duration isn't limited, so we kindly ask young artists and their professors to provide the list of compositions on their repertoire (including durations). Depending on the number of applications, the organizer will publish the final chosen programme.

We invite performers of all instruments, as well as singers (solo, duet, and chamber groups). We kindly ask soloists to bring their accompaniment.

2. Presentation of papers

The second part of the symposium will take place on November 13, 2009.

- Topics for announcements and debates may be related to the scientific project topics in the domain of the symposium
- Other topics in target research ground are welcome

Please send your application by October 11 to the following address:
tomislav.vrandecic@ufzg.hr
